Born in a Silicon Valley laboratory, two androids named Carbon and Silicon will bear witness to the turning point towards humanity's future as technology comes into direct confrontation with ecological, economic, and migratory crises. Through their eyes, we rediscover our planet Earth as it reaches the famous point of no return, longsince portended by scientists: in Ukraine, a giant wall prevents immigrants from setting foot on Western European soil; in Japan, rising water levels have forced its inhabitants to abandon their country; in the desolate lands of the North Pole, petroleum companies have extracted the last remaining fossil fuels.
