Every day, John drives from his home in a small town west of Milford, New Jersey to his friend Sam's bar, where they chat and have a coffee before John's work day begins. John is a ranger in Passaic County – nothing unusual about that. Except that Clinton Road, 15 km of asphalt that he patrols daily, turns out to be the most haunted road in the United States, plagued by disturbing disappearances and paranormal phenomena... As it just so happens, it's also the road where his only son, Benjamin, was last seen before he disappeared. But John, who is unable to grieve for his son, takes refuge in an altered reality where fantasies creep their way in... On the morning in question, John and Sam are discussing a strange new disappearance near Clinton Road...
