Brittany, 1825. Guillaume Montbrun is an impetuous, frivolous young man who gets his kicks fro fighting duels. With his eyes closed, he shoots off the ear of the son of Ar Braz. But this time, Honorin, his tutor, smells trouble. He sends Guillaume off to Paris just before he himself is assassinated by a certain Rutherford. Now Guillaume is accused of murder and is being pursued by Rutherford and a furious Ar Braz. However, he has a sympathetic friend, Paul Sudrie, a dwarf, who takes him by ship to Russia: "Either you trust me or you can return to your Brittany and be lynched."
