40-year-old Flora has just gone through a bitter divorce after 20 years of marriage. Thankfully, she can count on the support of her friends: Roxane, the cool hippie who loves to garden, Lea, the tireless career woman, and her old neighbor, Venerable. Like her friends, Flora would love to find her soul mate, but it's just not that simple. She has several promising dates, but once the first flush of passion is over, her lovers seem to disappear into the night. Why does this keep happening? Is she not attractive enough? Is she so difficult to be around? Or is she being sabotaged by someone close to her? A story for the divorced (and perpetually single) 40-somethings who just want to take a moment to catch their breath, and maybe even enjoy their singledom, told through the eyes of Flora and her hilarious entourage.

Flora et les étoiles
filantes

Je connais Vénéral depuis
ce jour maudit où notre maison fut cambriolée de nuit.

Au fond, s'il avait fermé les yeux sur ce qui ne le regardait pas, je serais sans doute encore mariée...

Non. Je dors avec des boules Quiès.

Tiens... Il y a une raison ?

À votre avis ?

Non, avec des somnifères.

Parce que j'ai pas la conscience tranquille, je suppose !! Merde alors ! C'est quoi, ces questions !? Vous croyez que je me suis cambriolé, moi-même ?!

Pour toucher l'assurance.

Chéri, calme-toi.

Oui, monsieur, calmez-vous !
