Lyon, France, in a future that is not so out of reach that it blends with our current times. The far right is more and more prominent and the city is overflowing with tensions. Three queer people in a polyamorous relationship with its highs and lows, feelings and hopes, live in a world on the verge of fascism. We follow them for a night, as a group and within their community, as they are fighting for their rights from a hacker space, until far rights militia comes to after them. They will have to rebuild a safe space. Absorbed into this storyline, we discover their relationship, the uncovering of their identities, their search for building the foundations of an unconventional love. Between violence and tenderness, it is the portrait of a generation fighting for who they are and the world they want to live in.
