Harriet Ashtray's world resembles 19th century England in every way. That is, except for one small detail: the giant sea monsters that inhabit its waters, brought forth by the sea god Céto. When she was eleven, Harriet killed a man during a pirate attack on her father's boat in a North African kingdom. For many years her life continued as normal and she was brought up just like any other young English girl of high birth, surrounded by her brothers and a great aunt. But when, eleven years later, Harriet comes across an old childhood friend, the murder she committed all those years ago will change the course of her destiny...
