So far, for Victor, a school year is like bungee jumping without the cord. Painful. What would he prefer to be doing? Listening to the Rolling Stones, stuffing his face with Turkish delight with his friend Haïçam, talking about mechanics with his weird father... When he's not having fun hiding the toilet paper from the girls' toilets, he's trying to get out of all the punishments that are constantly coming his way.

But when Marie-Jose, an absolute genius, comes into his life during a math test, his whole world turns upside down... Why is this talented cellist, who is top of her class, suddenly interested in him? A strange friendship is born between these two teenagers who are total opposites... Will they be able to keep Marie-Jose's big secret under wraps until the very end?
