A Catalan family who fled the Spanish Civil War in 1938 is separated upon arrival in France. The mother and daughter are sent to a camp in Argeles, the father to a camp in Angoulême, from where he is then deported to the Mauthausen concentration camp. In 1975, the daughter, Angelita, is urgently summoned to her mother's bedside in Barcelona, a city where the latter was never supposed to return after the war. Forty years of family life must be rewritten, as Spain witnesses the last days of the dictatorship (General Franco died in November 1975). Inspired by the family story of the illustrator, Eduard Torrents, and narrated by Denis Lapière (Le Tour de Valse).
