May 1967 to May 1968. The joyful and positive story of how the inhabitants of two villages in southwest France made their dreams come true.

Linked by a bridge over the River Garonne and by the game of rugby, Larroque and Castelnau are in a fix. Their teams are second-rate, and their results are getting worse and worse. Trouble is, the "boys" lack motivation. Yet, in southwest France, rugby is a religion. Every village has a rugby club and every Sunday there is a match, with its confrontations and reconciliations. Teachers, businessmen, even priests do all they can to make them win...
