Joann Sfar revisits one of his first loves—fantasy—to tell the funny and terrifying story of a reckless teenager all alone in a world full of monsters

She's the beloved young daughter of her parents, educated and progressive monarchs who have spent all their fortune on art and culture, and who are left defenseless when an army of blood-thirsty monsters attack their castle!

The young princess is awoken in the middle of the night by wildfire! Leaning over her bed is a lustful looking orc with a micro penis... Trained in martial arts, she's able to escape from her room. As she's getting away she runs into the palace's magician, he gives her an exceptional gift from the back of his dusty old lab: 'a bicycle.' In the company of this rolling, ringing and illuminating thing, our heroine leaves the destroyed castle and hits the road... A road which will be just as dangerous for a young girl all by herself.
