In the year 15,000 B.C., when ice and snow still cover a large part of the world, three saber-tooth tigers are born. With his yellow and fragile body, his one tooth and very long tail, one little "Sabre" stands out from the pack. Despite reluctance from the adult tigers, the newborn tiger takes part in every adventure. Like the others, he hunts buffalo and mammoths, heads off in search of faraway lands, and learns to survive.

But who really is Sabre? What is the cause of his strange appearance? Like a subliminal image, Eric Feres answers these questions with clues skillfully hidden throughout the story...
