Angie Pescarelle is a cosmetic researcher. She hires a fishing guide, Steve Crouchouze, to help her secure an enzyme from a fish that's supposed to have rejuvenating properties. Steve, a ladies' man, falls for Angie the moment he sees her, but the independent young woman seems immune to his advances. As they approach the fishing spot, Steve and Angie stumble upon an empty truck with a very peculiar design. This is actually a time machine belonging to slavers from the future, who have journeyed from the year 2109 back to our time in search of humans to capture. While the slavers hunt their prey a little further off, Miss Pescarelle and her guide enter the truck. Steve accidentally triggers the time-travel system, and they're off — back to the era of the dinosaurs...A small marvel of subtle humor, shifting with remarkable ease from situation comedy to sophisticated irony, touching on the quirky and off-beat along the way.
